RECORD BREAKERS

By
Marcel Reinard

Schools and students in the borough have again broken records in another year of improved GCSE results.

This summer, Hackney beat its best-ever record – set last year – for students achieving five GCSEs, including English and Maths, at A*-C grade.

This year, 56 per cent of students got five good GCSEs, rising from 52 per cent in 2009. Last year also saw Hackney beat the national average rate of 50 per cent, and is on course to do the same again, when the Department of Education releases the official figures later this year.

Many Hackney schools were individually celebrating their highest-ever results, including Our Lady's Convent High School; Hackney Free and Parochial; Clapton Girls' Technology College; and Haggerston School.

At Our Lady's Convent, 71 per cent of students got at least five good GCSEs, an improvement on 69 per cent last year.

Head teacher Jane Gray said: "The secret of our success?

We're putting the right children on the right courses. We make it really clear to pupils what they need to do to get to the next step and we make sure they're really motivated to get there."

At Clapton Girls', 60 per cent of students achieved five or more GCSEs, compared with 47 per cent last year.

Head teacher Cheryl Day said: "These are outstanding results – better than the national average and our best-ever in our history."

"There are a lot of happy girls today, they've done brilliantly."

Haggerston School saw a rise to 55 per cent of students gaining five plus GCSEs, a six percentage point increase from last year.

Hackney Free, which is currently celebrating its 490th anniversary, also saw improvements as 42 per cent of students got five or more GCSEs, compared with 30 per cent in 2009.

Head teacher Richard Brown said: "These are the best GCSE results in the school's history."

"The number of children passing five GCSEs including English and Maths has doubled in the last two years."

"The students, supported by staff and parents, have worked really hard and deserve their success."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Woodberry housing office opens

HACKNEY Homes has opened a new housing office to provide tenancy and event information, as well as advice on anti-social behaviour (ASB) concerns to Woodberry Down residents.

Staff at Woodberry Down Neighbourhood Housing Office will also assist with management issues including repairs and cleaning, resident meetings and leasehold queries. In addition, an ASB surgery will be held every Friday from 2-5pm, where residents can speak to specialist staff in confidence about concerns they may have.

Resident Mary Omaru said: "It's really good to have an office right here on Woodberry Down."

The building, which will be shared with the Woodberry Down Regeneration Team, is open from 9am-5pm, Monday to Friday. Pinnacle, the housing contract manager for Woodberry Down, will continue to deliver housing management services for residents in the North East of the borough from its main office in Stamford Hill.

Your views on open spaces

RESIDENTS of all ages are being asked their opinions on unloved local spaces.

As part of the 'My City Too' project, young people will bring a Routemaster bus to Hothouse, E8, on 19 September, to canvass responses to a campaign to reclaim London's disused areas. Feedback will be collated and sent to policy-makers in the Capital. The movement hopes to place young Londoners at the heart of built environment policy and inspire them to take an active role in the city's development. Since 2007, more than 100 young people have helped develop the project. Activities so far have included an online survey of the ideas of over 1,000 young people across London; local community projects; and My City Too hustings for mayoral candidates at City Hall.

The visit is organised by charity Open City which also runs Open House Weekend, London's largest architectural festival (see page 7).

Mossbourne Academy again excelled with 82 per cent gaining at least five A*-C grade GCSEs.

Yesodey Hartorah saw 76 per cent of pupils achieving the same grades; Stoke Newington School and College had 50 per cent; and, Skinners' Company 40 per cent.

Clapton Girls' Murshida Mirzan, 16, was one of Hackney's highest achievers, getting 11 A*s in her GCSEs. Hoping for a career in medicine, she said: "I had the motivation to do well. I knew that my parents and my teachers had faith in me and that gave me a huge amount of support."

High attendance might have been one of Courtney Caton's secrets to success. The 16-year-old from Haggerston School achieved nine A*s and three As, and never took a day off school. She said: "I worked really hard and pushed myself. It was in the last month before the exams that I got serious. I've been so lucky to have loads of good teachers."

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "I'd like to congratulate all our young people who worked hard and collected their GCSE results last month. I'm pleased to see the borough's results continuing to improve. I hope all the hard work our students have put in will allow them to continue to achieve, whether that's in further education, training or employment."

Alan Wood, The Learning Trust Chief Executive, added: "These tremendous results are a deserved reward for the hard work of teachers, governors, parents, support staff and, most particularly, the students themselves."

Mossbourne Academy students were also celebrating on results day. Meltern Kartel (left) achieved two A*s and seven As, plus a BTEC distinction in Business. She said: "I'm generally happy with my grades, but now I'm going home to party."

Ayla Bulgan (centre) was pleased with her four A*s and six As, as well as achieving a BTEC distinction in Business. She said: "I did way better than expected. I'm going to party too!"

Issa Yahya (right) took his four As and three Bs in his stride, but admitted: "I'm surprised to get an A in Maths."

The borough's disabled young athletes visited Stoke Mandeville in the run up to the Games. Insets: Youngsters received expert advice on a number of sports

By
Emma Britton

CHILDREN had the chance to try out a range of new sports at Stoke Mandeville – the home of the Paralympic Games.

With just two years to go until the start of the 2012 Paralympics, 17 disabled young people enjoyed a free four-day trip, from 24 to 27 August, taking part in activities including badminton, archery, wheelchair basketball, tennis and boccia – a Paralympic sport similar to boules.

And they were thrilled to be joined by Paralympic swimmer and gold medallist Sascha Kindred OBE, who learnt to swim in Hackney.

The visit to Stoke Mandeville Stadium, the National Centre for Disability Sport, was offered to local children because Hackney is a host borough for the 2012 Games.

Children from schools including Stormont House, Horizon and the Petchey Academy were given the opportunity to take part through Hackney Council and The Learning Trust, which runs the borough's schools.

Kim Wright, the Council's Corporate Director for Community Services, said: "This was a wonderful opportunity for the children to take part in different sports and meet new friends.

"I hope that as they live in a host borough for the 2012 Games, they will feel inspired to keep active and healthy."

There was also a chance for residents to find out more about opportunities linked to the 2012 Games, such as volunteering, training, employment and sports, during a series of lunchtime events held at the 2012 information stand in the Hackney Service Centre, Hillman Street, E8.

Among those on hand to answer questions on 31 August was local Paralympic swimmer and the borough's 2012 ambassador, Dervis Konuralp.

Olympic site springs into life

A GOLDEN meadow of wildflowers buzzing with bees and butterflies is already blooming around the Olympic Stadium, two years before the 2012 Games.

As one of more than 10 football pitch-size meadows set to be created for the Games, the flowers are due to bloom again in time for the opening ceremony.

The diverse mix of plants – including cornflowers, marigolds, Californian poppies and prairie flowers – will provide a colourful golden backdrop to the Games and also become a haven for wildlife.

Wildflower experts from the University of Sheffield designed the range of late flowering annual perennial meadows. They will be sown later in planting season and cut back to ensure they bloom throughout the Games.

Believe in Peace Week

SOME of the best young local talent in fashion, music, dance and poetry will be showcased at the upcoming 'Believe' event.

The free Hackney Empire show will be presented by 2008 Olympic bronze medallist Tasha Danvers and comedian Lil Man and forms part of Peace Week, the annual call for people to make a difference to the place they live, work, study or play.

The event is organised annually by the Robert Levy Foundation, a youth charity set up by the family of 16-year-old Robert Levy who was murdered in 2004 a few yards from his Hackney home.

The Foundation promotes education and positive activities for young people.

The Believe event is supported by Team Hackney, the borough's strategic partnership and takes place on 18 September. Peace Week runs from 19-26 September. For more information, visit: www.robertlevyfoundation.org

SPRINGFIELD Festival proved a fitting finale to Hackney's Parks For Life programme of summer events, with more than 5,000 people enjoying the day.

The event on 22 August offered a six-hour extravaganza of music, sport, food and fun. Attractions for younger audience members included a climbing wall, play area, face painting, circus performers and giant snakes and ladders.

People hoping to brush up on their culinary skills were not disappointed either. Local chefs were on hand to give healthy food demonstrations, which were introduced by Andi Oliver of the BBC's 'Neneh & Andi Dish It Up' programme, and Kerryann Dunlop, one of the original apprentices at Jamie Oliver's Fifteen restaurant in Shoreditch.

Other highlights included a 'Hackney's Got Talent' competition on the main stage, where young people from Fawcett Estate, Clapton, got their chance to play Simon Cowell for the afternoon. With the London 2012 Games on the horizon, residents of all ages also got the chance to take part in their own mini Olympics – the Hackney Homes Games.

The festival in Springfield Park, Clapton, was organised by the Council, Hackney Homes and NHS City and Hackney.

Kim Wright, the Council's Corporate Director of Community Services, said: "I'm delighted we have brought the curtain down on this year's Parks For Life programme in such style."

"When you consider the quality of the borough's award-winning parks and green spaces, it's no surprise that this year's events have been so popular and well-attended."

STOKE Newington School and Clapton Girls Technology College will start the academic year with brand new modern buildings, thanks to Hackney's Building Schools for the Future (BSF) programme.

More than 2,000 students will benefit from the completion of Phase One of the BSF programme, which has seen marked transformations in the learning environments of many pupils in the borough.

All of Hackney's secondary schools will see the benefit of £170million of investment, despite the Government scrapping the BSF programme in other parts of the country.

The final stages of works at Clapton Girls Technology College, which will be unveiled later this year, include a complete refurbishment of all the existing school buildings, plus the creation of a new dining pavilion, assembly hall, modern science labs, and expressive arts spaces.

The scheme also delivers two new buildings with bespoke facilities for a new sixth form college; special educational needs areas; external landscaping; and a courtyard.

Stoke Newington School has also benefited from work to accommodate nine more classrooms, a 600-seat theatre, 6,500 sq ft games hall, new sixth form facilities and music department.

Residents can take a sneak-peek inside the new Stoke Newington School when it opens its doors on 18 September as part of the Open House London.

Hackney's BSF programme is set to transform every secondary, special education needs school and pupil referral units in Hackney by 2015.

MEMORIES of old clubs and blues parties will be explored in an upcoming roots of reggae exhibition that traces the music's journey from Jamaica to Dalston.

The exhibition at Hackney Museum shows how reggae has influenced fashion, identity and a wealth of other music styles. It features a series of images from Hackney-born photographer Dennis Morris who won international acclaim with his iconic images of Bob Marley (pictured left) on tour in the UK. His work also shows a wealth of cutting edge reggae musicians that he captured on camera for close to 35 years. 'Reggae Rebels' takes place at Hackney Museum from 14 September to 8 January 2011. Among the new features this year is a cycling tour from Hothouse, E8, to Fish Island, E3. Organiser Richard Brown, of architects Ash Sakula, said: "It's a quicker and more unique way to look at artists' way of living. I live over at Fish Island and it'll include a tour of my house so that's a bit daunting."

“It's a quicker and more unique way to look at artists' way of living, especially as parts of the tour are quite cut off”

There are also tours of Arnold Circus, E2; Shoreditch Town Hall, EC1; St Augustine's Tower, E8; The Bridge (E2) and City (E9) academies; Hackney Empire, E8; Village Underground, EC2; and the Round Chapel, E5.

Another borough highlight is Bateman's Row in Shoreditch, a five-storey live-work space. It is one of only two UK-based RIBA Stirling Prize nominees.

Steve Douglas, the Council's Corporate Director for Neighbourhoods and Regeneration, said: "High quality design helps to create successful neighbourhoods, and getting the chance to go behind closed doors is a great opportunity to find out more about the role building design plays in our lives."

Jimmy MacDonald, Shoreditch resident and founder of design exhibition specialists Tent London, says East London has much to offer the creative industries

By
Marcel Reinard

SPACE. Jimmy MacDonald's final frontier. As interested in the recesses of a single, well-crafted object, as a warehouse filled with the work of hundreds of designers, space seems paramount for the founder of event consultancy firm Tent London.

He expects around 19,000 visitors to attend this year's Tent London event, which showcases 'design across all disciplines'. It is a huge logistical process, conducted from the company's office in Shoreditch Town Hall.

He admits: "There's a panel of external experts who look through hundreds of applications in just one day. Very 'yes, no, yes, no'. Including the operations, it's an awful lot of work to organise, but every time it gets a little easier."

Tent London is in its fourth year at the Old Truman Brewery, in Brick Lane, presenting everything from interior design to digital installations.

Born in Ireland and growing up in South Africa, Jimmy came to London in 1994 to study Interior Design at Kingston University.

He says: "My father ran an architect's practice in South Africa, so I've always been around design of sorts. In many ways South Africa is devoid of design, so it was really exciting to see things going on over here and see what a massive industry it is."

He began his first business venture while still a student. "We were already rolling, there was never a point where we thought we should get a job. We already had a live one," he says.

From there, he set up 100% East, to showcase designers from East London, and has gone on to create the Tent London festival with Ian Rudge, who founded trade exhibition company 100% Design.

For this year's showcase, he's especially looking forward to seeing works by Danish craft maker Stine Jespersen. One of her pieces is made of tiny porcelain cylinders that are individually pinched at the corners then placed together to create unique objects. Jimmy reveals: "If you put it in a kiln and fire it up, if it's not made properly, it will explode because the air tries to get out. There's a proper skill in making it."

“In ‘media-land’, Soho used to be ‘it’. It still is for film, but for ad agencies and designers, east can offer bigger buildings”

He also points out the way in which technology has changed things, for example lamps traditionally made for use with incandescent light bulbs, which are gradually being phased out by manufacturers.

"There's no more of them, so designers have to come up with a way of getting the same effect out of an energy saving bulb and that comes down to the design of the lamp," he adds.

Tent London will also feature an area dedicated to eco design. So, are designers getting greener? "Not everyone is becoming sustainability aware," he admits. "But it's being drummed in at university to use Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) wood. Some of the materials now available are only FSC, so lots of products coming onto the market are eco."

Jimmy moved to Shoreditch eight years ago and praises the area for its development.

He says: "The neighbourhood is improving and it's exciting that it's kept its independent shops as that's really important.

"I'm very interested in Lifestyle Bazaar on Kingsland Road; it's a great design store that represents a lot of our exhibitors. There's also Mathmos who make the famous lava lamps. They moved to Kingsland Road, too.

"In 'media-land', Soho used to be 'it'. It still is for film, but for ad agencies and designers, going East can offer bigger buildings.

"Creative industries always like to break new ground and that includes occupying different types of spaces. It may have started with affordability, but now it's developed. That's the way the creative industry rolls."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I have some old batteries that I need to dispose of, what is the best way to do this?

A: Around 98 per cent of batteries currently end up in landfill sites across the UK, where they leak toxic chemicals into the soil and water, harming the environment and potentially human health.

From February however, retailers that sell more than 32kg of batteries a year (equivalent to one four pack of AA batteries a day) were required by law to accept used ones for recycling. The Council has also put eight battery recycling bins across the borough in all its libraries.

The preferred option however, rather than recycling, is to buy rechargeable batteries that save you money and are good for the environment. The Council's Recycling Team is giving away rechargeable battery packs to the first 30 people that answer the following question correctly:

What is the UK's battery recycling target by 2012?

a) 10%; b) 25%; c) 95%.

An artist's impression of how the completed Athletes' Village, featuring the Wetlands Park, will look. Inset: Plan of the village site showing new green spaces

By
Sarah Menz

PLANS to create an extensive wetlands park, as well as play areas and open spaces in the 2012 Athletes' Village site have been unveiled by the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA).

The first stage of landscaping works on the 2.5 hectare, tree-lined, wetlands park is already underway. It will feature three ponds and two marshland areas.

Additionally, a large wildflower lawn, scattered with trees will create a picnic area. While pathways and seating areas will be established throughout, leading directly into the wider Olympic Park site.

More than 700 new trees will form a 'gateway' into the wetlands area.

A variety of native species will be used including field maple, common alder, silver birch, black poplar, aspen, English oak, hornbeam and willow.

Wildflower, tree and hedge planting has been designed to progress from the natural landscape of the wetlands areas in the west of the site to the more urban areas of Stratford and Leyton to the east.

Planting will include more than 70,000 wild flower and aquatic plants.

Furthermore, 60 bird boxes are to be installed and new habitats created for a range of species including dragonflies, butterflies, swifts, swallows, martins, kingfishers and bats.

The Athletes' Village, which lies adjacent to the Olympic Park, will accommodate athletes and officials during the Games.

After 2012, the Village will provide 2,818 new homes for East London.

Overall, the Olympic Park landscaping project will eventually create 10 hectares of parklands, wetlands, and open space, with more than 2,000 new trees and over 100,000 wetland and wild flower plants.

Volunteers from Openreach helped maintain Hertford Union Canal

Vital canal route gets treated

A TEAM of 40 volunteers from BT swapped their phones and computers for life-jackets and paintbrushes to refurbish gates along the Hertford Union Canal in Hackney.

The team was made up of staff from Openreach, BT's UK-wide local network business, and led by Nicola Porter-Vaughn, who said: "We're delighted to be helping British Waterways by re-painting some of the lock-side furniture near the Olympic Stadium.

"The Hackney area will really be in the spotlight as London 2012 draws closer, so we're pleased to be helping it look at its best."

Jon Guest, from British Waterways, added: "Thousands of people use London's towpaths each week as green routes across the city. Unfortunately, a minority of visitors leave behind their litter, and worse still, graffiti these historic waterways.

"British Waterways is pleased to be working with volunteers from Openreach. Their help has been invaluable in tackling some of the tasks we need to complete to make sure London's waterways are looking their best before the summer of 2012."

Nearly one million Londoners live within a ten minute walk of a waterway. They are an important community resource, but need constant care and maintenance to ensure they remain, safe, accessible and enjoyable.

Recycling help for private flats

By Sarah Menz

DO you live in a privately managed block of flats and don't have adequate recycling facilities? If so, the Council can help.

Residents can request that recycling facilities are installed at the development.

Staff will organise a time to come and assess the property and liaise with the managing agent to set up a new recycling site.

High-rise flats can be provided with two large bins: one for mixed recycling (aerosols, cardboard, cartons, drink cans, food tins, mixed glass and plastic packaging), and the other for paper (newspapers, leaflets and magazines). For blocks where space is limited, one bin may be provided for both mixed recycling and paper.

The Council can install recycling facilities for privately managed flats

The Council is committed to supporting the regional effort to recycle 50 per cent of all rubbish in the North London Waste Authority area, which includes Hackney, by 2020.

In order to do this, it needs to ensure that residents have access to all the recycling services they are entitled to.

The Council's Director of Neighbourhoods and Regeneration, Steve Douglas, said: "Creating a greener, more sustainable Hackney is everyone's responsibility. To make sure you are doing your bit, call the Recycling Team and arrange an assessment today."

It's breeding season, so gulls will be gulls

RESIDENTS preparing to trim unruly foliage or chop down a tree branch, are being asked to hold fire: you could also disturb late nesting birds.

The peak season has ended, but garden birds like pigeons and collared doves have an extended breeding period and may still be nesting, according to the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds (RSPB). Most garden birds breed between March and August, but some species will be on their nests until late into September.

Ivy on walls or garden hedges, bushes and trees still have an abundance of fruit and berries that could help birds and other wildlife through winter.

The late breeding season is also the reason behind the more noticeable vocal activity of gulls in the area.

Over the past month, the RSPB has received an increase in enquiries from the public about gulls. Juveniles are finding their voices and parents are calling for their offspring to test their wings.

The RSPB is urging residents to be tolerant as gulls are often perceived as intimidating. They are only aggressive if they're protecting their young or feel threatened by us. For more info visit: www.rspb.org.uk/hfw

Early learners

Students from Petchey Academy celebrate their GCSE results. Inset: The moment of truth for one pupil

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

STUDENTS from Petchey Academy have shown their future potential by achieving GCSE success one year early.

Eighty five per cent of Year 10 students have already achieved A*-C grades in Maths and 89 per cent in English.

Every Year 10 student at the Shacklewell Lane school was encouraged to take at least one GCSE a year early; and 80 per cent achieved an A*-C grade in at least one subject.

New Principal Olivia Cole was upbeat about the grades, she said: "This is just a taste of what's to come at The Petchey Academy. Every since our first success when the future Year 11 were in Year 9, the vast majority of our students are fixed and focused on success.

"As I take over this year, I am very excited that The Petchey Academy has the potential to become one of the top five per cent high performing schools in England and Wales."

Founding Principal David Daniel, who retired last month, added: "The achievement of current Year 10 students are a credit to the commitment of all the staff and provide a fitting commentary to the inspiration of our patron, Jack Petchey and his Foundation, in putting faith in the capability of the young people of Shacklewell."

Youngsters make the headlines

YOUNG people in Hackney got an insight into the demands of a busy newsroom from some of the country's leading journalists.

During a week-long summer school, 26 students from Hackney and surrounding boroughs visited the BBC Television Centre, where they practised their presenting skills in a mock news reading session; were taught the art of blog writing; and worked on a photo assignment.

Journalists from The

Youngsters from Hackney and nearby boroughs visited the BBC studios

Times, News of the World and The Wall Street Journal also voluntary ran sessions. Tania Choudhury, 17, from Clapton Girls'

Technology College, said: "I now know what I want to pursue in life."

The Young Journalists' Academy summer school was initiated by online magazine spiked, and is run by Journalism Education, a not-for-profit organisation.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Misbah Siddique will see her designs up on the catwalk

Teens in fashion week debut

TWO 17-year-old designers from Hackney are about to see their clothes modelled on a London Fashion Week catwalk. Misbah Siddique, of Clapton Girls' School, and Charlie Ibouillie, from Hackney Community College, have reached the final of the FAD Fashion Futures 2 project.

Their prize includes a summer school at the University of East London and seeing their work under the spotlight at the 'Vauxhall Fashion Scout' event on 20 September.

During the project, the students carried out research at the Victoria & Albert Museum's medieval and Renaissance exhibition. Misbah designed a cape inspired by the draped fabric on Renaissance statues; while Charlie's sculptural piece of hand embroidery is taken from wrought iron furnishings and caskets.

Misbah said: "It's made me think that I can do stuff – like I can be more creative and open to new ideas."

The Hothouse team created their ideas in a workshop

Volunteers hothouse their ideas

YOUNG volunteers have won praise for helping to organise a celebration of children's artwork.

The showcase took the form of a catwalk parade, where children modelled their bandannas, bags and t-shirts made during the workshops.

The catwalk backdrop was decorated with over 50 mosaics made by the children. Over 125 young people took part in the programme. Youth volunteer, Damien Jeffrey, said: "Thank you for having me as your volunteer, I had a fabulous time, I can't wait for next year."

The Hothouse Design Assistant Volunteer Team were trained through a V Inspire Choice FM grant in 2009 and are now pursuing creative industries studies at sixth form colleges. Deputy Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Linda Kelly, opened the event, and gave particular praise to the volunteers, all aged 16-25.

The Alchemist

Until 10 September, 130 Hoxton Street, N1 6SH

HOXTON Hall stages Ben Jonson's hilarious and ruthless masterpiece: a classic tale of the rich deserting the city causing three characters to join forces as alchemists.

Full of wit, the 17th century play satirises the vices of mankind focusing on what happens when people seek advantages over others.

While this current production is already contemporary, Hoxton Hall and charity Firehouse are now planning a further reworking — using stories provided by the community. Over the coming months a stall will be set up on Hoxton Street Market to listen to resident tales and create a new version that firmly belongs to Hoxton.

Musicians including The Roots will be paying tribute to the Panthers

By Marcel Reinard

Tongues On Fire: A tribute to the Black Panthers

11 Sep, 7.30pm, £15-£30
Barbican Centre, Silk Street, EC2Y 8DS
A musical tribute at the Barbican dips into the cultural influence of controversial 60s political civil rights group the Black Panthers. Still dividing opinion among historians and the public alike today, the movement that disbanded in the 1980s remains one of the defining tenets of the US black power movement, characterised in part by its revolutionary stance, artwork and speeches.

Inextricably linked to the Panthers, The Last Poets, formed in 1968, are widely viewed as one of the earliest influences on hip-hop: their raps, rhythms and dedication to African American politics laid the groundwork to the emergence of political hip-hop decades later. Barbican brings together members of The Last Poets along with leftfield rap musicians The Roots, tenor saxophonist David Murray from the 1970s freeform jazz scene and artwork from Emory Douglas, the former Minister of Culture for the Black Panther Party.

REVIEW

Aphex Twin was one of the headline acts on Saturday night

By Rosalind Stannard

LED Festival 27-28 August, Victoria Park, E9

The first London Electronic Dance (LED) festival took place against a backdrop of cold and rainy skies. Stiff competition from competing festivals that weekend – for both bands and fans – led to the entire second stage being cancelled on Friday. Luckily, David Guetta, Soulwax, Calvin Harris, Audio Bullys and Zombie Nation held the fort on the main stage, while the likes of Goldfrapp, Friendly Fires and local lad Professor Green did their best to make people forget the weather on Saturday.

The headliners included Leftfield, performing their first UK show in 10 years, and they were brilliant. The crowd pounded the mud, dancing to live performances from many of the singers and MCs who had appeared across the group's two albums. 'Phat Planet', (which soundtracked the famous Guinness advert featuring galloping horses in the surf) was a particular highlight, sending bone-breaking basslines deep into Hackney. With a laser show and special guest performers dressed as bears, Aphex Twin promised much, but mostly played other people's songs. His set was lacking his trademark irreverence and originality. A shame. At £40 a ticket, LED was a little cheaper than the much bigger Lovebox but the beer was a choking £4 a can. LED is aimed at dedicated electronic music lovers who have probably been gracing dancefloors for at least a decade. With their audience all grown up, the organisers will have to bear that in mind, and get some more live acts. And hopefully, move Professor Green up the bill next year.

Mini Moguls await the final decision. Below from top: one of the finalists; overall winner William Adoasi; the judging panel. Bottom, left: a team of entrepreneurs

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

STOKE Newington Town Hall has played host to this year's Mini Mogul contest.

Supported by Team Hackney, the competition asked 16 to 25-year-old entrepreneurs to submit business ideas to be presented to a panel of judges.

Chosen from hundreds of applications, six finalists had the added pressure of demonstrating their ideas in front of the 400-strong audience at the N16 Hall.

Andrew Fraser, Mini Mogul Director, said: "Most of the businesses were up and running but what we were looking for was potential, how each could take their idea further."

Judges scored the finalists across four categories: idea feasibility; originality; content of presentation; and communication.

William Adoasi earned £10,000 worth of prizes after taking first place at the 21 August event.

His South London company, Starlight Sports Academy, promotes health and sport to young people. The prize included £3,000 investment and office space for a year.

Hands up, who wants to volunteer?

Members of Disability Backup took a tour of the Olympic Park site and also travelled to Brighton to visit the Federation of Disabled People

By
Marcel Reinard

A HACKNEY charity has been researching ways to improve services, access and opportunities for local people with disabilities – including volunteering at the 2012 Games.

Disability Backup members took a tour of the Olympic Park site on 22 August, led by Sarah Salem, one of the group's members who is also a Olympic and Paralympic Games volunteer.

She said: "We're always looking for local disabled people to get more involved in the Olympics, there are so many different volunteering opportunities available."

In addition, the group travelled to Brighton on 19 August to visit the Federation of Disabled People (FED), a group with similar aims.

Catherine Love, Disability Backup Co-ordinator, said: "It was interesting that, even though Brighton and Hackney are very different, the issues for disabled people were very similar. Topics such as transport and access were top of the agenda."

Both organisations are looking into working together in the future, with FED hoping to come to Hackney for a similar visit.

Disability Backup is a forum open to anyone who is disabled in Hackney. There are 300 members and the group meets monthly to discuss a range of topics.

Hospices unite for summer camp

TWO hospices from Hackney and Newham have teamed up to run a summer camp for young adults making the transition between children and adult services.

Young visitors from Beckton's Richard House Children's Hospice were able to find out about the care on offer at St Joseph's, their local adult hospice.

Over August, the group had a chance to tour the Mare Street facilities, get benefits advice and some occupational therapy.

Harry Singh, 23, said: "Transition from a children's to an adult hospice is quite a difficult and daunting process."

Nags Saiq, 23, a day patient at St Joseph's added: "This has given me a chance to mix with people of my own age. It has also meant there was someone to give the Richard House patients a first-hand account of care on offer."

Community health trainers will help over-64s to keep healthy

Fitness trainers for seniors

RESIDENTS over 64 are being offered well-being advice to improve their health and fitness.

Hoxton Health's trainers can help older people assess their health and potential lifestyle risks, and signpost the support services on offer in the borough.

This can include registering with a GP, finding interest groups such as swimming and gardening, or generally improving mental and physical health.

As part of this drive, a 'Give It A Go' day will introduce some of the activities available in the borough including short mat bowls, swingball, yoga and table tennis.

Diana Rogers, from Hoxton Health, said: "Don't worry if you think you are not fit, or haven't done anything like this for years. Everyone has to start somewhere on the road to getting fitter and the community health trainers are there to help you to be able to participate, whatever it is that is holding you back."

The project is funded by Team Hackney and NHS City and Hackney and based at St Leonard's Hospital, Hoxton.

Give It A Go takes place at Queensbridge Community and Sports Centre, E5, from 10-3.30pm, on 29 September. Contact the health trainers on: 020 7683 4289.

Blog to help social care groups

COMMUNITY groups that work with local people are being asked to help the Council involve clients in the adult social care change programme – and sign up to a new blog.

From next year, adults who need long-term care will be able to buy the services they want using a 'personal budget' from the Council, giving them more choice and control over their lives.

If you work with residents who use social services, staff from the Council's Transformation of Adult Social Care (TRASC) team can offer advice and help.

Its blog is a vital tool to keep up-to-date with progress and ensure your organisation is ready. By signing up you will be able to receive instant e-mail alerts about key issues and important information.

As well as being able to use the 'personalisation tag cloud' to search for specific items, you'll also be able to write comments and raise issues.

For more information about the TRASC team, contact Caroline Howard on: 020 8356 4134, or e-mail: caroline.howard@hackney.gov.uk. To find out more about the blog, visit: http://hackneytrasc.wordpress.com

By Libby Adams, Principal Archivist, Hackney Archives

B RITAIN had been at war with Germany for almost a year as the summer of 1940 approached, yet despite intensive civil defence preparations, the anticipated air raids had not yet materialised.

T. E. Brown, a Clapton resident who served as an ARP (Air Raid Precautions) Warden, kept a detailed diary which charted these preparations.

Following the surrender of France in June, 1940, and the evacuation of stranded British forces from Dunkirk, Britain was the only country then still at war with Nazi Germany.

Its air force, the Luftwaffe, attacked the RAF in July, 1940, and intense air battles continued well into August, with the success of the German invasion plan depending on air superiority to prevent attacks on invading troops.

Daytime bombing of Britain began in July, 1940, targeting docks, factories and similar locations. Civilian areas began to be bombed in August, although the main target was still the RAF.

On 24 August 1940, T. E. Brown writes: “Another raid at 8.20 just as I was leaving for work. Lasted about an hour... Another raid at 3.20 just as I was halfway through my dinner. Heard a sound as of a plane diving bombing or coming down with engine on. Saw nothing and heard little. All over in time for tea.”

Britain carried out a bombing raid over Berlin on 25 August in retaliation, and the Luftwaffe was ordered to shift its focus from attacking the RAF to a bombing campaign against the civilian population.

T. E. Brown’s diary entry for Saturday, 7 September, 1940 begins: “Something expectant about today. No usual early morning raid, but while on the platform at Finchley Central about 24 fighters rose up from Hendon or Cricklewood I should think. Expecting warning all morning, but nothing happened – until the afternoon. About 4.0 or perhaps a little later I had just gone up for an afternoon nap when the warning sounded. As usual now, we (Dad, Mum & self) didn’t hurry, and went to the Anderson with binoculars... But soon after we had a surprise, hearing sound of engines from the South, and then they appeared in view. Hundreds of them, it seemed, in about 4 batches. Heavy bombers, their fighters above, and our fighters (a few could be seen) weaving in and out.”

The Blitz had begun, and Brown’s diary entries from that point on become detailed accounts of long nights spent responding to bombs falling in his part of Clapton. The diary entry for the second night, 8-9 September, reveals: “Short warning in the morning, probably a reconnaissance plane. Usual warning in the evening, & then followed the worst night I believed possible...”

As he walked down Chatsworth Road he heard a bomb coming his way and sheltered next to a shop as it fell. Once he had recovered his composure, he checked that everyone in the shelters in South Millfields, where he had been heading, was all right, and was then called to an incident in Prout Road which occupied the rest of his night: “I heard cries for help coming from Gomer Terrace... I rushed up to the post. There they said a bomb had fallen in Prout Road. The path in front of the post was littered with debris. On running up to the top of the path I saw the wreckage & heard S yelling out for assistance... When the all clear went at dawn the sight was pitiful. The extent of the damage was far greater than I had anticipated and looking at the heap of rubble etc. It was hard to believe that anybody could be under there and still be living...”

Brown remained on duty until 7am when he had to go home and try to get a few hours’ sleep before going to work.

Detailed accounts from the records of Hackney Metropolitan Borough Council include files on the bombs which fell on Prout Road and Cleveleys Road on 8-9 September (Brown mentions the Cleveleys Road bomb in his diary although he was not directly involved).

The Blitz began with the bombing of London for 57 consecutive nights, but was extended to other important military and industrial areas across the country.

By the end of May, 1941, over 43,000 civilians – half of them in London – had been killed in bombing raids, and more than a million houses destroyed or damaged in London alone.

To mark the 70th anniversary of the start of the Blitz, there will be an exhibition about how it affected Hackney, at the Archives, from 7 September. To find out more about Hackney during the Second World War, see ‘Hackney at War’, by Jennifer Golden.

The Beth intentions

The short film follows the experiences of a Hoxton resident called Beth as she extols the delights of the borough. Below: Dermot O'Leary and Edith Bowman

A HOXTON resident is appearing in a film with Radio One DJ Edith Bowman and X-Factor presenter Dermot O'Leary being shown across London cinemas.

In a short promoting the benefits of cycling in the capital, the woman referred to as simply 'Beth', speaks about her positive experiences of getting around the city by bike and the differences from her hometown.

The film takes in many of the borough's landmarks including the Regent's Canal, as she endorses discovering hidden London.

An extended version of the film can be found on the Transport for London website alongside films fronted by celebrities that concentrate on London cycling, such as the Mayor's flagship Barclays Cycle Hire scheme, or the new Barclays Cycle Superhighways.

Kulveer Ranger, the Mayor's transport adviser, said: "London's cycling revolution will be televised in the form of these wonderfully-made little films. Cycling is the most civilised way to get around this great city and these films will spread the word and encourage more Londoners to hop on to their trusty metal steeds."

Enter the slow cycle contest

THE slowest cyclist in Hackney could win a prize worth £100. As part of three upcoming events under the banner 'Travel Smarter, Live Better', the Council has organised its first slow cycle contest.

Competitors can try as many times as they like to 'race' along a 10m track – the catch being it must be the slowest time without stopping or putting a foot down. The event has been organised with ProstrateUK to raise money for the cancer charity.

Other campaign days will see Goldsmiths Row transformed into a car-free zone with a temporary café and bike mechanic stand; and a bicycle pit stop afternoon at Well St Common.

All three days make up a wider campaign for EU Mobility Week (16-26 September).

Slow Cycling takes place at London Fields, E8, on 26 September from 11am; Well Street bicycle pit stop, E9, on 16 September; and 'In Town Without My Car' on Goldsmiths Row, E2, on 22 September.

To register for the Slow Cycle, visit: www.prostateuk.org.

For more information on EU Mobility Week, visit: www.mobilityweek.eu

Free bike microchipping

THE Council and Hackney police are offering free bicycle micro-chipping to help combat bike theft. Normally costing around £15, the service will place a small electronic device on pedal cycles that can help police identify both the owner and if it has been stolen. Experts will also be on hand for advice on locks and helmets.

The scheme is being run in partnership with the Wick and Hackney Central Safer Neighbourhoods policing teams. Workshops are set to take place at Hackney Library and Museum, 1 Reading Lane, E8, on 13 September; Well Street Common, E9, 15 September; St John's Churchyard, E5, 23 September; Tesco, Well Street, E5, on 24 September. All times run from 8am-1pm.

Job Profile

Adedoyin Awomosu

Deputy Head of Services, Parking & Markets talks to Hackney Today about the Administrator role

Why is the Council's Parking & Markets team a good place to work?

Our working environment is friendly with a great team spirit. Many of our current managers started their careers at the bottom and have been rewarded through hard work and commitment to the service. Our service makes a difference to the lives of residents, helping to promote community cohesion and neighbourhood improvement.

What makes this a rewarding job?

The administrators are the heart and soul of the service. You take satisfaction in knowing that you are appreciated. Markets and Parking is a really exciting area to work in at the moment, with lots of projects going on, for example, the £1 million regeneration of Ridley Road Market.

What are the challenges?

This is an ever-changing environment and it's always interesting. Added to this, will be the challenge of planning the parking needs that the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games will bring. Much of the work we do is deadline driven and the successful candidate will have to use their own initiative. They'll also be helping to deliver events for staff and residents which can be very rewarding when it all comes together.

What attributes does the candidate need?

They'll need to be enthusiastic, resourceful, have a good eye for detail and exceptional organisational skills. They'll be flexible, have lots of initiative and be willing to face and resolve difficult situations when necessary. We're looking for someone who is proficient in Word, Excel, PowerPoint and e-mail, who has a successful track record in administrative work.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Edeeno, 24, originally from Jamaica, was unemployed for over a year when he started his hospitality training at Hoxton Apprentice in July. He said: "I needed a challenge and saw Hoxton Apprentice as a perfect opportunity to learn new skills and gain some qualifications."

Working front of house, Edeeno enjoys dealing with customers on a daily basis. They regularly comment on his bubbly rapport and confidence.

Once his training is complete, Edeeno hopes to find a permanent job in the hospitality industry, but would still like to gain further training to build his knowledge and experience in the field. He explained: "Now I feel like I can go out and find a permanent job and keep it, thanks to skills I've learnt at Hoxton Apprentice. It's a real stepping stone into the world of work."

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain an NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people.

Licensing policy

THERE is still time for residents and businesses to have their say on the way licensed premises are managed in Hackney.

The Council launched a consultation on 2 August about its revised Licensing Policy, which sets out clear guidelines for how licensed businesses will help the Council and police to drive down anti-social behaviour, public disorder, noise nuisance and crime that is related to the borough's many pubs, restaurants, bars and clubs.

The proposals outline practical ways of working to ensure that businesses can thrive and people continue to come to Hackney for a great night out, but without disturbing residents.

Drop-in sessions are scheduled on the following dates, times and locations:

- 20-24 September, 10am to 4pm, at Hackney Service Centre, 1 Hillman Street, E8
- 30 September, 4pm to

8pm, CLR James Library, 24-30 Dalston Lane, E8

- 5 October, 4pm to 8pm, Shoreditch Town Hall, 380 Old Street, EC1
- 14 October, 2pm to 8pm, Stoke Newington Library, 184 Stoke Newington Church Street, N16.

The consultation closes on 25 October. To find out more and to complete an online survey visit:

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note that some councillors do not hold surgeries in August. To check surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/1-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Hackney Council is committed to improving services, increasing opportunities for all, and making a safer, cleaner, greener borough. Here we focus on a service that helps to make this possible:

Grounds force

TRANSFORMING ESTATES INTO GREEN HAVENS

Chris Tsentides, Estates Grounds Maintenance Area Manager

Having joined Hackney Council 28 years ago as a gardener, Chris Tsentides is absolutely passionate about the green spaces in the borough.

He supervises all the gardeners working on estates and attends regular site visits to carry out inspections and assist gardeners with their duties. Chris also helps residents bring their vision for an estate to reality.

For example, on Beechholme Estate, in E5, the team have worked with local people to add colour and vibrancy to its green spaces by planting a wide range of plants, and dedicating a section of the estate to a communal allotment. He says: "The gardeners are out on estates every day and are committed to doing everything to improve the environment for residents."

"Working closely with residents, gardeners have started to instil a sense of pride in estates."

"It's a pleasure when we receive positive feedback from residents and a joy to see the vibrant colours of shrubs and plants throughout our estates which residents can enjoy."

By

Olaide Oyekanmi

THE Hackney Homes Grounds Maintenance Service is responsible for the upkeep of over 300 Council estates in the borough.

The team of 35 gardeners are out and about daily, tending communal areas, cutting grass, pruning shrubs, and planting flower beds.

They also engage residents in a number of initiatives that include encouraging local food-growing schemes, and helping elderly and vulnerable residents to maintain their own gardens.

This year, the team have been visiting estates and attending a host of community events to spread the word on how to grow your own plants, vegetables and herbs at home, and turn outdoor areas on estates into thriving gardens.

The Hackney Homes grounds maintenance service helps with estates' upkeep growing projects on their estates.
